1 CO's Address

Happy 200th Week, Zetarites!!!

This proud SIM has made it to a milestone that some SIMs never live to see. There are a select list of people I'd like to recognize who have been awarded both the 100th and 200th week ribbons. They are: Bo, Kelso, Dak, Towers & Donna! Additionally, although they're on leave I'd like to recognize Chris & Trisa for also making it another 100 weeks. Finally, Joho was around for both, but left us in between. Thank y'all for sticking with me this long, I am constantly amazed at your seemingly infinite levels of endurance and patience, especially Bo :) To the rest of you, I hope to see you at week 300 as well!

This week marks our last week of R&R, so make the most of it. We will be starting our next plot at the beginning of next week, which will take place at home, so don't worry too much about wrapping everything up by Sunday, you'll still have a few days IC to deal with those loose ends before we get into the full swing of things.

Good job logging this week, I challenged you (in channel) to get 75 logs, but we missed it by 1 log! We also had a surge in unexcused SIMmers, so please be mindful of sending in excuses. I'm a broken record, but it's a necessary reminder (it seems). Seeing as we almost made the challenge, I'll keep the bar there - Let's hit 75 logs this last week of R&R, I know that we can do it!

Congratulations again on week 200, you are truly an amazing crew! In recognition of your efforts, you've all be awarded the Zetari 200th Ribbon, which is awarded for being a member during Zetari's 200th week of existence. Check your bios, you'll see it on your awards list!

Happy SIMming,
Juls

2.1 Plot Summary

Prepared by Tam Tam!

This week's backlog sees Kelso meet with Captain Kar, of the civilian freighter Black Star, and explain him what the contract as civilian freighter hired by StarFleet means. Mostly danger, since the war was still raging on.

We start this week on the Arboretum, where a strange scene is taking place: Isha comes to the rescue, so to speak, of Zeke, who seems to be having a quite bad time. She take him out of the pond, help him dry, and they soon open their hearts to each other. Isha accompanies him to his quarters, and, after some more discussion, she agrees to remain there for the night, feeling too tired to go back to her own quarters.

Meanwhile, Edwards has a meeting with Carl and his friend Mitch, about what happened down on Zetari V, and he asks for explanation. Carl tells him what happened, and Edwards set both Cadets for some additional training, and ask them to write a letter to the family of the child.

The next morning, Isha goes to the Infirmary for her check-up. Aella is given the task to take care of the Security Officer, and, to the surprise of everyone in the Infirmary, it goes actually rather well, and both the Security Officer and the Doctor are smiling when the check-up is over.

Charlotte is still on the 'get accustomed' phase, and still as baffled by the sheer size of the station than when she came.

Later on, Isha goes back to the Security HQ, and meets with Edwards and Indy. The dog as a squeaking toy, gift from Trisa, but Edwards seems more interested in the uncharacteristic happy mood of the Security Officer. After a bit of verbal evasion, she quickly summarize her recent adventures with Zeke, avoiding the most embarrassing parts.

Meanwhile, on the holodeck, Matthias continues working on his holonovel, which implies a ship with a new transwarp drive and some sort of a nasty encounter with a Ferengi vessel sporting a cloaking shield. The next chapter sees him, as the Captain, make a quick tour of his ship, with his Klingon XO.

Commander Jack Walsh arrives on Zetari (Welcome aboard!) and he quickly settles at what seems to be one of his favorite place: a bar! He reflects on his life and his previous duties, which brings quite bitter thoughts.

Aella's friend Kaelyn finally awakens, but their discussion quickly takes an odd turn, and Aella retreats to do her duties.

The same morning, Zeke wakes up to find Isha gone, then he calls her sister for their usual breakfast together. Both siblings discusses together about recent happenings in their life, and Zeke's sister is quite happy to hear that her brother may finally have a girlfriend, or, at least, a potential one.

The Arboretum is host of an unusual scene, when Edwards, Juls and their respective canine companions meet and walk together. The two officers discusses about life and duty, and also the big animal companions they both have.

Later, on the Holodeck, Juls, Tamara and Cobaka, the Commodore's dog, are climbing up a tall mountain. The two women get to know each other as they climb up, and they get a bit closer after they reached the peak of the mountain.

Juls is obviously on a 'dog-caring' mood, because it is once again with Cobaka that she trips nearly literally into a fragment of her past, a certain Commander Walsh. The two old friends quickly get reacquainted together, and they go to discuss about their respective lives since last time they met. Then they switch to why Walsh was posted on Zetari, and what he'd do here. It ends up with Juls extending an offer to cook dinner for the new Security Officer.

Charlotte and Tom finally meet in the Infirmary, and Tom asks her some question about her background and her past, curious about this new member of the medical staff. He raises some concerns over some medical problems she has, but she manages to reassure him.

Elsewhere on the Infirmary, Amelia goes to Nurse Russel, the previous Head Nurse, who is pregnant, and she asks her for some help with the schedule.

Later on, Tom has a visit from Kelso, who wants to have his Borg implants removed, as much of them than possible anyway. Tom accepts to try to help Kelso, and he arranges for some tests on the lawyer, to assess what can be done.

Meanwhile, in the Holodeck, we find Carl and Mitch going about several simulations, set up by Edwards, to show them the merits of teamwork, among other things. Then they report to Edwards, explain what they learnt, and inform him that the dead Kirmani had no family, but Edwards ask for the letter anyway.

On the evening, Amelia gets a visit from Gavyn. After dealing with her newly-acquired puppy, the two lovebirds get to chat together, but it quickly turns into something more romantic, and finally, it ends up in bed. They awakens in the morning, happy together, and get some seconds in the shower. Then, as both have a day off, they decide to spend it together, and be mostly lazy.

On the Operations Level, Ross comes back to duty, and he inquires about what he could do. Once a certain smear of lipstick is dealt with, Tamara informs him of the power troubles, and he gets to work on the sensors, in case it is a sensor glitch.

A new bar opens on the Station, Ray's Boom Boom Room, and it is graced by the presence of Edwards, Zeke, Tamara and John. Edwards and Zeke are the first to arrive, chatting together like two old friends reunited after a while, then they are joined by the feline and the ambassador.

An old lover of Chloe steps foot on the starbase, and he heads straight for her quarters. Lieutenant Commander Adam Towers vanished years ago, and his sudden and unexpected appearance leaves Chloe baffled, but it soon changes. ((Go read the saga, it is awesome!))

The Holodeck is host to a training session involving Isha and Zeke. The two works themselves out, and more. Then they discuss about combat, and why Isha went to the Security, and Zeke manages to strike the right chord with his words, causing Isha to break and start crying. She wakes up the next morning, sleeping in Zeke's quarters. Zeke is at her side to help her through this hard time, and she, once again, opens her heart and mind to him, and tells him about her tumultuous past. Zeke also speaks a bit about himself, and it seems like their relationship is quickly growing.

Meanwhile, Triss keeps on his daily routine life as XO, although he isn't feeling as well than usual.

His holodeck time being over, Matthias goes to Ashley, our new Counselor, to ask for her help with a patient, who complaints of a lot of aches, but the medical couldn't find the cause, and suspects psychological troubles. Ashley agrees to help and go visit the patient.

However, before she could go, Zeke came to find her to apologize. He invite Ashley for lunch, and, as he feels a bit better, he let go and starts chatting with the young Counselor, and explains a bit about him. They manage to work out an agreement together, Zeke will continue his sessions, but out of the office, and Ashley will try and help him to be over with the sessions.

Like Triss, Bailyn goes about her routine in Flight Ops, but, something seems to bother the pilot, and she decides to take a break and go to the gym.

Meanwhile, in her quarters, Tamara writes a personal log, and she's still quite unhappy to have Sven working so hard, and also because of the strange problems with the power grid, and a few other things.

Charlotte and Carl meet again, and, after some talk, Charlotte theorizes that he suffers a post-traumatic stress syndrome. Carl asks Charlotte to stay with him, and the two ends up in a holodeck, chatting about their past lives, and it soon turns into a more romantic meeting. It seems that they share some feelings for each other.

Down on the Brig, Flint is sleeping, after he was found following his stunt at a bar. He dreams about an old encounter with a stubborn isolinear chip, and smiles on his sleep, much to the puzzlement of the security officers.

Gavyn has the unexpected visit of Edwards, who comes to have some help in discovering the meaning of a set of numbers he found earlier. After some research and exchange of ideas, Edwards finally realizes that the numbers are ballistic trajectories, which intersects inside the station. He immediately go to the location, and fall into a trap that was set for him by his sister Traci. He gets beaten quite hard, but, thanks to the surprise intervention of Hartwell, Traci is defeated and taken into custody.
